After reading Kathleen Tessaro's first novel, Elegance, which drew on a French manual of style and manners written back in the 1950's, I was very intrigued to see what she would come up with next. Her latest novel, Innocence, is what she came up with next.

Kathleen Tessaro writes what I refer to as chic-lit, so far she published three novels, I read the first two Elegance and Innocence, I liked them both. Innocence has one of my favourite cover in the whole chic-lit department. The guardian refers to Innocence as 'A wonderful tale of lust, love, life and redemption.'
