Written on the author's deathbed in 1943, The Need for Roots is first and foremost about the possibility of reconstruction in Europe, and more specifically in France, after the Second World War. It's very much of its time, complete with long passages concerning French history and the French government in exile.

The Need for Roots: Prelude to a Declaration of Duties ...

The Need for Roots: Prelude to a Declaration of Duties Towards Mankind Simone Weil Unlike Whitman, who celebrated contradictions and made these explode like fireworks, Simone Weil tries to explain and fabricate a system out of the soul's contradictory "needs," (as distinct from wants), not as a form of celebration, but perhaps more in an attempt to provide calm.
