We ' ve all said it. When it comes to beauty and self-care, we ' ve heard the phrase THE THINGS WE DO echoed from one woman to another, like a secret password to womanhood. We use it in reference to all the things we have experienced for the sake of refinement. We have plucked, waxed, cramped, squeezed, layered, poked, and birthed.

Things We Do for Love Roisin did not disappoint with this book. A gentle story about people who all come together for an art drawing class they have never tried before, and meeting people they otherwise would never have met. Over the six weeks they gradually understand each of the others and their little problems.
